METHOD

How I built it

1 Data

Five tables: 2 fact tables (134,590 bookings and 9,200 daily capacity rows) and 3 dimensions (date, hotels, room class), covering 92 days.

2 Model

Star schema with 6 one-to-many relationships from both fact tables to the shared date, hotel and room dimensions.

3 Logic

42 DAX measures: core hotel KPIs, week on week change, dynamic card labels and conditional colours. Weekend defined as Friday and Saturday nights.

4 Dashboard

One page: 6 KPI cards, 6 visuals and 4 slicers (city, room class, platform, month and week). KPI totals checked against the source data.

Atliq Grands is a fictional hotel chain. All figures come from a sample dataset.

Q1 LEADERSHIP

Overall performance

How is the portfolio performing overall?

£13.91M

Realised revenue from 134,590 bookings, with 57.87% of available room nights sold.

ALL PROPERTIES, 1 MAY TO 31 JUL 2022

| | |
|---|---|
| ADR | £103.39 |

| Realisation | 70.15% |
| Cancellation rate | 24.83% |
| Daily sellable room nights | 2,528 |

Card labels compare the latest week in view. With no filter this is W32, which holds one day (31 Jul).

Q2 REVENUE MANAGEMENT

Weekly trend

How do the key metrics move week to week?

11.4 pts

Occupancy fell to about 51% in five weeks (W21, W23, W26, W30, W31) while ADR held between £102.81 and £104.01.

13 FULL WEEKS, W19 TO W31

Demand, not price, drives the swings: RevPAR falls with occupancy.

Q3 REVENUE MANAGEMENT

Weekday vs weekend

Do weekends perform better than weekdays?

+6.65 pts

Weekend nights sell more rooms (62.64% vs 55.99%), but ADR is almost the same, so prices do not rise with demand.

| Weekend RevPAR | £64.94 |
